XPERT eCampus 5.0 - Complete Social Learning Platform

Falls Church, VA. July 22, 2010. Q2 Learning, LLC announced today the release of the 5.0 version of their award-winning XPERT eCampus social learning platform. This new release offers a full suite of formal, informal, and just-in-time learning solutions.

Release 5.0 revolutionizes the delivery of rich online learning experiences with two major new modules. First, the new portal engine delivers a customized user experience. Learners can easily drag and drop dozens of widgets and social media tools into their customized workspaces, while providing object-level role-based management needed for use in today's corporate environment. Second, the XPERT Access module is a game-changing social performance support tool. It's powerful search engine and three-click design puts processes, procedures, competitive intelligence, and other critical information within 10-second reach.

"In a market that is exploding with social media, I challenged our team to deliver a complete experience that incorporates the latest tools and technology, but most importantly, truly produces measurable capability changes," said Dr. Bill Bruck, Principal and co-founder of Q2 Learning. "XPERT Access uses a total integration of wikis, forums, and eLearning modules, etc. which goes beyond other knowledge management tools. The platform integrates content, community, and learning to provide total performance support."

The XPERT eCampus social learning platform is the only system that features re-usable learning maps with dependencies and email pings; integrates trackable social learning activities into structured learning processes; and reports on the activities of coaches as well as learners.

With these new additions, the XPERT eCampus allows performance and the user experience to be front and center, enabling training organizations to save thousands of dollars and hours or days of seat time while exponentially increasing speed to proficiency."
